Whatever the men may be, I belleve the women are slucere, especially the foreigners, who are ignorant in the extreme and show it in their faces and speech and manners. Among the better classes, however, the womon are lutelligant and refined and well educated, sending their sons to college and their daughters to Europe, and living in every respect like their wealthy Goullle neighbors. Some of them profess to be very happy with their sisters, as they call their lins-hunds' wives, while others openly denonace a system which has brought so much evil to them.

I was taken to the Lion House to rall upon Eliza Snow, a widow of the great apostle, who had, when he died, eighteen wives, not including Ann Eliza, and forty-seven or lifty chil-dren. The room in which I was re-ceived was a pleasant, home-like apartment, with many portraits of the Youngs upon the walls, and among them one of Brigham. Sister Eliz, as she was called, had been the wife of Joseph Smith, the first expounder of Mormonism, and was about eighty years of age, with the sweet, placid face of one who, having ontlived the joys and sorrows of tife, was patiently waiting for the end. She was very intelligent and well informed, and talked freely upon various subjeels, especially that of polygamy, in which she fully helieved as samething sacred and holy, alleging many arguments in its defense, one of which was that as women us a class, are much parer than man, it is better for a young girl to be slath. In the love of a good man than first in the heart of a bad one. She was a Mormon, and had been the wife of a man of many wives, and on that point I had no sympathy with her, but she impressed me as a slucere Christian woman, with noili-ing in her religion except polygamy which the most rigid Evangelist could not Indorse; and whon not long ago I heard that she was dead I felt sure that she had found the rest she was writing for when, on the steps of the Liou House, with the moonlight fulling on her silvery halv, she gave me her blessing and said good-byo forever. - Mary J. The Difference Between Republicans and Democrats

Sam Jones made a sensation in A didine is a idmple squeezad. You can get there tinancially, but riches nero like walking sticks—one will help you along, but tifty will break you down. All some people want to do is to get where they can sit down If I had but one prayer for the United States I would pray: Give us for a President every four years, O Lord, a man who has comage, a man who has a backbone like a clicus pole. Weve got to begin at the top and work down to reform, but that needs grit. Most preachers can jump on the poor old sinner, but when they jamp on the President or Govenor of Mayor, they have got to git. A may or a chicken without sand in his giz z ord be a fallure. I'm not a Demo erat or a Republican or a third part I'm one of these one-un-a-hill m.n. I'm one of these cone-in-n-n-nr sort of fellows. But I will tell you what I believe will happen. In Nicy-ember the Democrats will have an I-suc-prohibition or whisky, heaven or hell. You never enn have any thing but a solid south by shaking the bloody skirl, but once get a real lashe and you won't have a solin south. The difference between the Democrats and Republicans Is that the Democrats come right out and say 'We favor whisky.' The Republicans don't say so, but they are there just the same."
